Experts Study Dam Site

Designers and geologists are coming down from San Francisco this week to inspect the new dam-site in the upper Carmel Valley and check the preliminary work done by the California Water and Telephone Company such as test-holes and excavation for bedrock. Previously the water company had planned on building the dam in the Cachagua around the Flavin ranch, but owing to the fact that it was impossible to come to an agreement with the property owners in the district, another site was chosen farther up the Valley.

Although the water company had already purchased several properties in the Cachagua including a large ranch owned by Captain Chitterin, built a road and had the ground thoroughly inspected by engineers and geologists, they were forced to drop the project because the majority of property owners not only insisted on getting high prices for their holdings, but strenuously objected to the plan of a dam being built in that particular region. It the dam had been built where the water company originally planned it, it would have meant that the people who lived there would have had to evacuate their homes and purchase property in adjacent areas where they would have had to go to the expense of building new houses.

The upper Carmel Valley site which has been chosen has no houses on it, so the California Water and Telephone Company anticipates no difficulty in arranging a reasonable purchase price providing the geologists give them the go-ahead signal.

LIONS CLUB TALK

At the meeting of the Carmel Lions Club on Tuesday night, George Johnson, head of a legal firm in Los Angeles, gave a talk on the FBI. Mr. Johnson, who served with the FBI during the war, came up from Los Angeles to visit his old college friend, Al Fry, manager of the La Playa Hotel. Also present at the Lions Club meeting was another college chum of Al Fry, Dick Peterson of San Francisco, a member of the legal department of the P.G. & E.

CARMEL STORY...

Who, living in Carmel today is a descendant of Honore Escolle, the California pioneer who established Monterey's first bakery?

How well do you know the Carmel Story Daisy Bostick is telling serially on the Feature Page of the Pine Cone?

Another column of the Feature Page contains the first published review of Sally Carrihar's (One Day on Beetle Rock) a new book, One Day at Teton Marsh. Carmelite C. Edward Graves met her at the Teton last month while photographing the mountains, had an opportunity to read her book in proof and sent us the review air mail from Yellowstone. Her publisher, Alfred Knopf, will bring the book out September 25.

Mrs. Bell Does Ceramic Portrait Of Philip Perel, Jr., Child Prodigy

A ceramic portrait of the child-genius, Philip Perel, Jr., of Memphis, Tennessee, who has attracted nation-wide attention in the press, was executed recently by Mrs. Frank Bell of Carmel whose ceramic figurines appear in various local shops as well as the City of Paris in San Francisco. Originator of the Colonial Bell, a Dresden type figurine, her work is called Bellware, and she has exhibited frequently during the past few months at the Clothesline Art Show in the Pine Inn Court.

Although Mrs. Bell had done ceramic portraits of her own children as well as a childhood portrait of June Delight Canoles, local dance-teacher, she had never done ceramic portraits professionally until Miss Lucille Gore, a close friend of the Perel family, who came to Carmel two months ago from Memphis, persuaded her to do one of the Perel child, known as "the genius of the South."

Miss Gore, interior decorator who makes her headquarters at the Frisbie Furniture Store on Dolores Street, struck by Mrs. Bell's unusual ability to capture the expressions of children, wrote a letter to the Perels, suggesting that they have Mrs. Bell do a portrait of Philip. Mrs. Bell worked from three photographs sent her by the boy's grandfather who owns one of the largest jewelry firms in the South.

The 4½ year-old prodigy taught himself to read at the age of three years, reads and discusses the Bible and is equally well-versed in the Old and New Testaments, and discusses the news with brilliance and penetration. According to Miss Gore who has known him ever since he was a baby, "He is very brilliant. He is more like a grown-up than a child. He knows so much that he has never been taught. He has adult eyes. And yet he is like a child. It is a curious thing. He's a very wonderful child and a very beautiful child with reddish hair and piercing blue eyes. His eyes look right through you. There is light all over him all the time. No artist can copy the expression in his eyes."

Miss Gore hopes that the Perel family may visit Carmel sometime during the next few months.

Juveniles Do Outstanding Work In New Play At Golden Bough

BY R. ELLIS ROBERTS

When I first started dramatic criticism in London, on W. W. Astor's Pall Mall Gazette and then on the Star, forty years ago, I soon discovered that of all pleasant occupations it was the most hazardous. All artists—otherwise there's no art—are sensitive. Some are tough, too: and who can say which gives the wretched critic more trouble? By the very nature of their calling those who act on the stage are the most sensitive (opera-singers are in a class by themselves); and ideally the critic of plays would live in a cork-lined room on a desert island, float invisibly to the auditorium on first nights, and remain anonymous. But all that is difficult to arrange; and the critic would miss knowing a great many delightful people.

This ominous opening precludes my confession that once again I had a most entertaining and enjoyable evening at The Golden Bough Playhouse; and salute Mr. Kuster for his enterprise and skill in finding so much local talent, and a play which, whatever its faults, gave grand opportunities, all well taken, to many younger members of the Monterey Peninsula's Community Players. And how lucky he is to have the chance of directing one who has long been known to the discerning as the Star of Carmel Point.

Marcia Kuster in this somewhat disorderly and innocent little play, combines the roles of enfant terrible and dea ex machina—truthful child, that is, and solver of grown-ups' problems. She is a born actress. Watch her when she has nothing to do except listen; all the time she is in the scene, of the scene, and never forgets that she is ten and a half year old Alix Morgan, sister of Tess (Barbara Van Dyke) Ilka (Willette Torras), youngest daughter of Louise Morgan (Dorothy Dean) and Charles, the world commentator who mercifully remains a voice on a gramophone record. Marcia Kuster radiates charm and vitality, and a mischievous kindness. Her delicate boredom at the Columbia student, Winston Atchison, is delightful.

She knows, this Alix, how much more sense she has than the grown-ups, or than her elder sisters, and tolerantly overlooks or corrects their blunders in living, most of which, as she says to Tack Cooper, (James Robinson), come from their habit of deceiving themselves and others. The Bees and the Flowers must be seen were it only for this one performance.

But how many other admirable performances there are! No one could guess, from their acting, that Barbara Van Dyke and Willette Torras were older than their stage ages of seventeen and fifteen (that's careless of me—perhaps they're not). Mrs. Van Dyke was extraordinarily successful in the changing of mood from high spirits and reckless plotting to adolescent misery, and Willette Torras was very good as Ilka, making the most of an awkward age and a situation full of possible and delightful trouble. As Winston Atchison Robert Jensen was often perfect in his presentation of a callow college-boy, as consummate in his ignorance as he was assured of his omniscience. He should however, guard against an occasional tendency to over-act. It is not the fault of the two leading actors that their performances seem less satisfying. THE RAIN

The long drought in Carmel was broken this week by a surprise sprinkle. Mrs. Paul Flinders reports .03 inches of rain fell in this area on Tuesday, September 16.

Pt. Lobos, River Mouth Subjects Of Mass Meeting

Mounting anxiety over the possible destruction of two scenic, natural areas, Pt. Lobos State Park and the Carmel River Mouth drove Carmel people to action this week.

The Board of Directors of Carmel Unincorporated meet next Wednesday noon to discuss how they can use the influence of the organization to expedite the purchase of the Carmel River Mouth by the County and State for a recreational area.

The Lobos League and The Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society are calling a public meeting at the Carmel High School music room at 7:30 Thursday, October 2 to discuss means of relieving Lobos of the pressure of the crowds of nature lovers who are flocking to the park in such hordes that they will, by their very numbers, destroy the beauty that attracts them there.

Charles Vogel, secretary of the county planning commission, has consented to attend the meeting to answer questions regarding the master plan that the county has worked out for the purchase of shore line parks and recreational areas.

Supervisor Andy Jacobsen and Carmel Martin, chairman of the county planning commission, have also been invited to attend.

Lobos League members and state park commissioners have expressed the opinion (unofficially) that much of the pressure could be taken off Lobos if fishing and picnicking were prohibited, and the shore line area from Lobos to and including the Carmel River mouth were acquired and set aside as a state park with picnic tables, barbecue pits and other facilities to compensate for the loss of Lobos as a recreation area.

The tule area in the vicinity of Carmel River Mouth, valued as a refuge for shore birds, has been given priority No. 2 in the county master plan for acquisition as a natural area, but the budget set up for acquiring such property allows only $20,000 a year to be set aside as matching funds. Since only $50,000 so far has been earmarked by the county and Del Monte Beach has priority No. 1, there is little likelihood that the Carmel River Mouth property will be purchased for many years to come, according to Supervisor Andrew Jacobsen, and acquiring the additional shore-line strip from the river to Lobos is even more chimerical under the present budget arrangements.

The residents of this area feel that delay will be disastrous to Lobos and to the natural area at the Carmel River mouth.

The possible solutions to the problems include, 1. Getting a change of priority for the River Mouth and Beach area. This would meet with violent opposition from Monterey, which would not surrender No. 1 priority for its beach without a struggle. 2. Persuading the Supervisors to increase the funds set aside for land acquisition matching fund, involving an increase in tax rate, which would arouse the opposition of other areas of the county.

Jacobsen says that there is a possibility that a 13 mile section of the shore line south of Big Sur, formerly part of Hunter Liggett (Continued on Page Four)

Biggest Dog Show Ever Is Scheduled At Mission Ranch

The Del Monte Kennel Club will hold its Twenty-Second Annual All-Breed Dog Show at the Mission Ranch Club on Sunday, September 21, and as entries already number more than 600, it looks as though it will be the largest show of its kind ever held on the Monterey Peninsula. There will be 50 or 60 local dogs shown, far exceeding the number appearing in Del Monte Kennel Club shows of previous years.

The largest number of entries will be working dogs, including boxers and collies, as well as sporting dogs, mainly represented by cockers. The children's handling classes, which are an innovation to be held for the first time this year, are creating a great deal of interest and two Spanish cocker pups will be given away to lucky ticket-holders.

50 dogs will appear in the obedience classes alone.

Mrs. Edward R. Renner is flying out from Great Barrington, Massachusetts to judge the pointers, Irish setters, English springer spaniels, pekingese and pugs, and Derek Rayne will be the local judge. Other judges will include Mrs. Joy Swan of Santa Ynez, Mrs. Florence Wilson Graham of Los Angeles, Mr. Frederick Palmer of Sacramento, Mrs. Arthur Schwind of Sherman Oaks, and Mr. B. B. Berman of Redwood City.

PADRE GRIDDERS OPEN SEASON AGAINST MONTEREY J.V. TODAY; KICKOFF AT 3:45

This afternoon at 3:45 on Bardarson Field, the 1947 edition of the Carmel High School varsity football team will get their initial taste of competition when they battle the strong Monterey Junior Varsity eleven. The Monterey squad is filled with seasoned performers who have had previous gridiron experience. Most of the players performing for the Toreadors are pushing the varsity for starting positions. Their backfield includes the classy quartet which sparked the best lightweight team the CCAL last season. With boys like Cummings, Grammatico, and Spiegler carrying the mail, a few Monterey touchdowns seem assured.

The Padres will do battle with the lightest eleven ever to represent the red and grey. Up front they will average 155 pounds, while the backs will have to eat a double portion of lunch to tip the scales at 140. Speed will compen-

La Perouse Honored In Impressive Ceremony At Carmel Mission Sunday

At an impressive ceremony at the Carmel Mission last Sunday, a bronze plaque struck off by the French government honoring the memory of Jean Francois Galaup, Comte de la Perouse, great navigator and leader of a scientific expedition which visited the Monterey Peninsula 161 years ago, was unveiled by Monsieur Andre Rousselet, Vice Consul of France at San Francisco. The first foreigner to visit the Spanish colonies in California, La Perouse spent a week at Mission San Carlos de Borromeo in 1786 as the guest of Father Fermin Lasuen, studying the languages of the Indians, their habits, handicrafts and customs, as well as the flora and fauna of the region.

In his speech of presentation, M. Rousselet stressed the common interests which united La Perouse and Father Lasuen, president of the California Missions, and this theme was developed further by Father Pierre Arvin who preached the sermon during the high mass following the unveiling of the plaque.

More than 200 members of the French colony came down from the San Francisco Bay region for the ceremony, as well as various prominent representatives of church and state, including M. Andre Rousselet, the French Vice-Consul, Major J. W. Stone, Adjutant General from Sacramento, representing Governor Earl Warren, Col. C. P. Sullivan from the Presidio of San Francisco representing General Mark W. Clark, Bishop A. J. Willinger of the Monterey-Fresno Diocese, Dr. Raoul

H. Blanquie, Father Pierre Arvin, and Senor Carlos Manzanares, Spanish consul at San Francisco. Also present were officers and members of the California Historical Society and several hundred residents of the Monterey Peninsula.

Following the presentation at Carmel Mission, a number of the guests and visiting dignitaries were invited to a luncheon at the Casa Munras in Monterey and later attended a tea at the Carmel Woods home of Countess Lillian Remillard Dandini, who is president of Le Salon Francais.

During the luncheon at Casa Munras, Dr. Raoul Blanquie spoke on the subject of La Perouse and his career, emphasizing his humanitarian spirit and broad scientific interests which led to his appointment by Louise XVI as commander of the expedition which circled the globe with instruments, textbooks, treaties and a completely equipped laboratory to study conditions in the New World during the 18th Century. Dr. Blanquie, who was introduced by Anson S. Blake, President of the California Historical Society, is the man directly responsible for the presentation of the La Perouse plaque to Carmel Mission. Although it was Prof. Gilbert Chinard, a member of the faculty of Princeton who originally suggested the idea, it was Blanquie who mentioned it to Georges Bidault at the Peace Conference in San Francisco two years ago.

Seated at the speaker's table were Carlos Manzanares, Spanish consul, Mme. Rousselet, Col. Sullivan, Major and Mrs. Stone and Father Michael D. O'Connell of Mission San Carlos de Borromeo.

Following Dr. Blanquie's address, medals which had been struck off by the French government especially in honor of the occasion were presented to Father O'Connell, Father Pierre Arvin, Major Stone, Dr. Blanquie, Colonel Sullivan, Mr. Blake, Dr. Carlos Manzanares, Allen Knight and Carmel Martin. Allen Knight and Carmel Martin represented respectively the cities of Carmel and Monterey.

Others present at the luncheon were members of the Knights of Columbus including Grand Knight, Tom Dorney; P. J. Dougherty, Neno Lucido, E. E. McFadden, Rodger Ernest, Pat Moriarty, Dr. Cusenza, Jaff Neker, Floyd Dinkle, and Horace Smario. Guests of the California Historical Society were Colonel Roger S. Fitch, Mrs. Harry Lusignan, Mrs. Anne Fisher, Mrs. Ethel Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. William O'Donnell, D. R. Jeffers, and Glen T. Goodwill.

Leaders Needed For Girl Scouts

Scout leaders are urgently needed for the Carmel Girl Scout Troop this fall which will have to discontinue its activities unless people come forward to help out. Virtually without leaders at the present time, the Carmel Girl Scout Troop has approximately 125 members, so many leaders are needed.

Any woman over the age of 21 is eligible to become a Scout leader and training will be given to inexperienced leaders. Those who are interested in contributing to this worthwhile civic cause are urged to contact Lee Jeffers at Carmel, 1868-W, or, the Monterey Girl Scout Office at Monterey, 4482, immediately.

In addition to Scout leaders, District members are needed as well as Troop Committee members. The response to the call for help was magnificent last year, and it is hoped that this year's plea will meet with the same result.

Frank Dickinson

Frank Dickinson, former resident of Carmel, died suddenly in San Diego September 13, at the home of his niece, Miss Marian Howes. Frank Dickinson was well known in Carmel where for years he was a member of the Ted Kuster group of Players. He was a brother of the late Mrs. Robert Howes.

His death was the result of a heart attack suffered as he was on his way to breakfast from his apartment in the garden.

League Schedules Discussion Groups For Coming Year

Two neighborhood discussion groups for Carmel, of the Monterey Peninsula League of Women Voters, were announced at the meeting Wednesday for the first and third Wednesdays of the month at the home of Mrs. Lee O. Kellogg on Scenic Drive at the foot of 11th Street, and the first and third Thursdays at the home of Mrs. Ferdinand W. Haasis on Torres Street and 8th. Between seventy and eighty women gathered for the luncheon meeting at Mission Ranch to welcome new members and to hear Mrs. Samuel C. May of Berkeley, state president, who explained the new League plan for meetings and discussed the way in which the organization functions on the state and on the national levels.

At the business meeting preceding Mrs. May's talk the League adopted the new by-laws which were revised to conform to the new national framework. The president, Mrs. Edmond Sullivan, presented the new officers, Miss Lydia Weld, first vice president, and Mrs. N. M. Leoni, director, appointed during the summer to replace Mrs. Wilbur Wilkinson and Mrs. Bertha Hellum, who have moved away. The third and fourth discussion groups will meet with Mrs. Leoni in Carmel Valley, and with Mrs. Charles Simpson in Monterey in the second and fourth weeks of the month. It is hoped that an evening group may be formed, and any others which may be desired. The first subject for study is taxes, both state and national, with Mrs. Howard Clark as resource chairman with the reference kit from the national, and suggestions for readings and matters for research.

Gentlemen:

My husband and I came to Carmel last March to make our home.

Our twelve year old grandson, Ronnie Woolverton, spent his summer vacation with us and we want to express our appreciation for the generous way he was received in the activities Carmel provides for young boys.

Our special thanks go to Wm. Muscutt and Swimming Instructor Coach George Mosolf whose tireless efforts and good sportsmanship are helping these youngsters to be interested in amusements which keep their minds active and clean and lead to good citizenship.

We would also like to take this opportunity to express our appreciation for the public spirited manner in which Mrs. Grace Howden allows the swimming pool at her home to be used by the children.

We cannot be too enthusiastic about what all these good people are doing for our children.

Sincerely,

Annie H. Davis

Whitman Show

By NANCY LOFTON

The Beardsley Memorial Room of the Carmel Art Association Gallery will be occupied until September 30, by a group of watercolors, drawings and lithographs by Paul Whitman.

Mr. Whitman's watercolors are skillfully and clearly painted. His style is somewhat reportorial, but competent and comfortable. He is reporting on a field he saw or a barn he passed and he saw the field clearly and plainly and in a good mid-day light. There is in these particular watercolors little attempt at interpretation. There is the simple statement "Here is a field on a mountain side. This is how it looked to me." In others of his pictures Mr. Whitman becomes more involved in problems of painting and communication and therefore less of a reporter. In five or more of his watercolors and in practically all of his lithographs and drawings he is concerned with the human figure darkly silhouetted against a meager light. Sometimes the light is fading, sometimes it is growing, but the theme of man as a hunter prowling through a fen-like landscape with a skyful of light overhead runs through many of his pictures. His most successful watercolors are those dealing with this crepuscular light. There is a boat in the middle of a small world of water walled in by mist about which Mr. Whitman has communicated a feeling. In his watercolor of the sand dunes, he paints with a high degree of skill and economy, suggesting his light and form with considerable feeling. This is a particularly fortunate watercolor because he manages to convey his reactions to his subjects, both primary and secondary, very clearly. There is no stress and strain in Mr. Whitman's work. He expresses his impressions without tremendous passion. Yet, what he has to say, he says well.

Carmel Music Lovers Look Forward To Hearing Paganini Quartet Oct. 9

BY EBEN WHITTLESEY

Carmel has become the scene of an unprecedented and highly interesting experiment in the musical world with the establishment in the Highlands of the permanent home of the home of the Paganini Quartet. The attention of lovers of chamber music throughout the country has been focused on this outstanding group of musicians throughout the past year, as they went about the country on their first tour. In concerts at Berkeley, Washington, D. C., New York, Seattle and elsewhere, they have been greeted with a public interest and critical acclaim rarely accorded to a new organization of musicians.

On October 9, the local public will have its first opportunity to hear the quartet in a concert at the Sunset Auditorium, under the sponsorship of the Monterey County Symphony Association. The event promises to be a brilliant opening for the fall and winter concert season. The few local music patrons who have had the opportunity to hear the quartet at informal gatherings in their Highlands home have been highly enthusiastic in their praise of the group.

The establishment of the quartet with its fabulous Stradivarius instruments by a far-sighted private patron of the arts, brings to mind the era of private sponsorship of musicians and composers in Europe in the Eighteenth Century which went far to promote the luxuriant flowering of musical genius in that period.

Today it is far too often true that the necessities of earning a living in a highly competitive world have prevented the development of great music and great artists. This is particularly true in the field of chamber music, which does not command the public interest given to symphonies and great soloists.

Each of the four artists, Henri Temianka, first violin, Gustave Rosseels, second violin, Robert Courte, viola, and Robert Maas, cello, has a distinguished background in his own right as a groups and as concert soloists. All except Mr. Temianka are Belgians who suffered great privations and hardship during the occupation of their country in the last war. They steadfastly maintained their artistic integrity by refusing repeated requests by the Germans to play on tours of Europe during the war. Some of these men were active in the underground. Mr. Temianka served the U. S. Government in the O. S. S.

The reunion of these four friends and their families in Carmel is an almost unbelievably happy fruition of their cherished dream of some day having their own quartet. The deep friendship and understanding between them coupled with their outstanding abilities produces an intangible unity of purpose and harmony that is readily noticeable in their playing. They seem to perform almost as one instrument of great complexity, yet the independent ability of each player is seen throughout everything they do.

Russia Is Not Our Major Problem; We Are The Problem, Says Jay Allen

The world is still full of disintegration and disillusionment regarding democracy and its effectiveness, Jay Allen, lecturer and war correspondent, told the Carmel Woman's Democratic Club at the September meeting last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Paul Low. Much has been lost to American imperialism in the countries that have been struggling for freedom and for the necessities of life. With no gain in the two years since the war's end, and with food even scarcer than during the conflict, they will turn to some other source for help unless democracy is more effective than it has been in settling the world's problems.

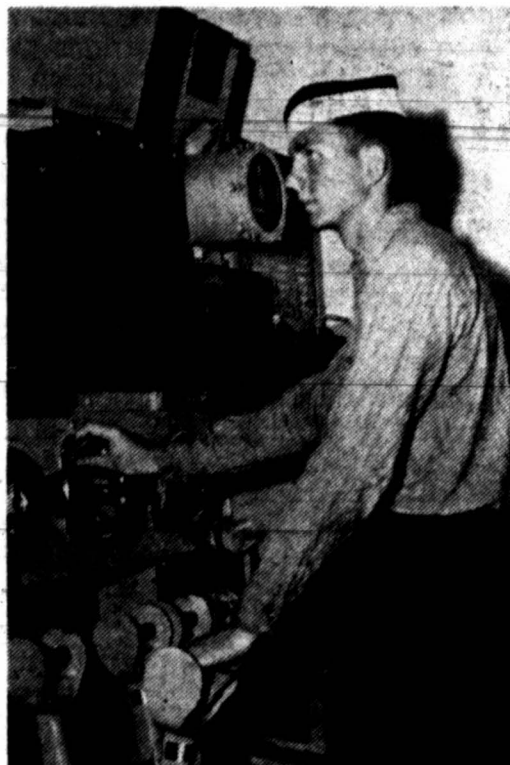

"Russia is not the major problem," said Mr. Allen emphatically, "the major problem is us! There is a limit to which Russia will go. What are we going to do in the great vacuum of western Europe to restore the democratic ideal?" He pointed out that before the war we had lost Spain as a democratic nation by refusing to permit the country's republican government to purchase arms to fight the falangist attackers, who in time overthrew the government and set up a dictatorship. Will the Marshall plan fill the vacuum? "Is there such a plan?" he asked. "It was proposed, but Congress went home without acting on it. If the specter of a renaissance Germany confronts the French, that may mean disaster, for western Europe will believe that American democracy does not exist for export."

"Much of Mr. Allen's talk was pessimistic, even cynical because of the failure of this country, during the past two decades, to see the necessity for a democratic attitude, economically and politically, in our relations with the rest of the world. Our discriminatory tariffs had a bad effect on world economy and tended to destroy this country's place during the thirties as the last, best hope of liberal and progressive groups in Europe," he said. Later "the Germans wrote the French newspapers in occupied France," said the speaker; "the papers were full of U. S. 'news'—of isolationism, race riots in Detroit, anti-Semitism in New York, aiming to take the heart out of European resistance. The effect was dreadful, tending to make the people lose faith in the United States democratic tradition." Mr. Allen was in a German concentration camp in France at this time and observed at first hand.

It rests now upon the American people to meet these problems of peace realistically and not worry about the charge of communism. "I'm willing to be an inveterate fellow traveler," said Mr. Allen, "with anybody who is going my way. Must I stop contributing for relief because of a communist on the committee?" He warned against being deterred by a smear campaign of reactionist persons who try to put red labels on all liberals. "The 19th Century was a reflection of our Revolution," he pointed out; "we changed the world with revolution—and with the Model T; in the 20th Century we changed it with the atom bomb. We must trim our capital," he added, "cut away the bad, avoid inflation and depression, then remain a force in the world, and fill the vacuum."

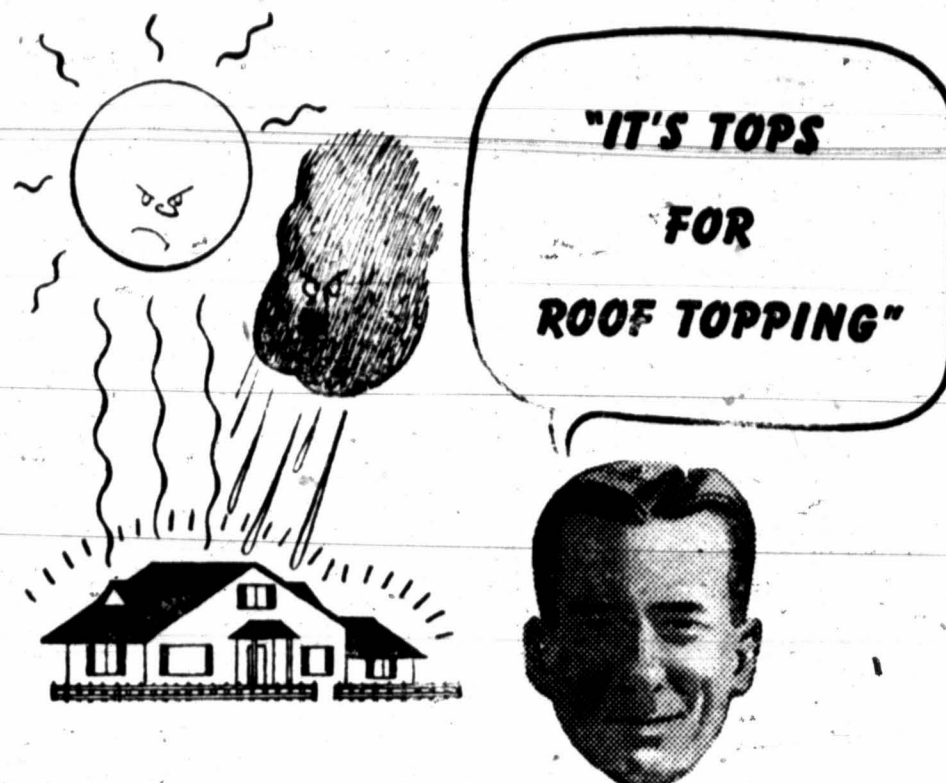

A short question period followed on present political trends as well as upon the situation in trouble spots of Europe. Mrs. Perry Newberry, president of the club, conducted the meeting, which had a

Pop Smith Back; Says All England Has To Stand In Line For Everything

Back in his Penthouse in Carmel after a flying trip to England, the land of his birth, Pop Smith says that London is still pretty much of a shambles after war and it will take years to rebuild. Whole blocks are wiped out with a few buildings left desolately standing; bomb craters still exist and churches are gutted by fire. All over the city, ruins reach up into the sky.

In London, he heard many tales of the blitz and remarked that "When you hear things first-hand, they seem so much worse". An air-raid warden told him of finding hands and legs sticking up out of demolished buildings and helping to dig people out of the rubble.

"One bomb struck a cemetery, and dozens of skeletons flying through the air. A wise person said, 'Thank God they bombed the dead instead of the living'".

In spite of the fact that Pop Smith was born and raised in England, he found its ways and customs strange to him after living so long in America, and most peculiar of all, perhaps, was that "It seemed to me all the English people looked alike. But the fact is that most of them have sharp features. It is very noticeable". He had forgotten that vehicles drive on the left side of the street in England, that mail boxes are called pillarboxes and that one "posts" a letter instead of "mailing" it. The intricacies of tipping left him bemused.

Although the food situation in England is critical, Pop Smith says that the spirit of the people is good and it is still "merry England."

"There are queues for everything," he remarked, "foods, buses, and a bus queue is something. They don't crowd like we do here, but take their turn." People are enjoying life, going to the movies, the legitimate theatres and pubs, and everyone looks healthy, especially the girls. "They do not use a lot of make up," he added, "They go about with their heads up and step out well."

Meals are served at hotels, "but hotels are strange places to eat" and no-one is allowed to have more than 5 shillings ($1.25) worth of food at one time. "If one has bread, no dessert or vice versa. No napkins. And in most places rather small portions".

Everything is rationed in England except fish, cocoa, and coffee, but as the British people "mostly drink tea, that seems rather cruel", Pop Smith remarks. The food ration for one person per week includes 3 ounces of bacon, 2 ounces of butter, 1 ounce of cooking fat, 3 ounces of margarine, ½ pound of sugar, ¼ pound of tea, 1 pound of jam or marmalade, very little meat or 2 pounds of "corned willie", and 2 loaves of bread or 2 pounds of flour. As only 7 points are allowed to buy other foods, they have few luxuries. Whale meat is popular in London at the moment, and Pop Smith says it's "rather nice".

One of the high points on his trip was a two week jaunt to Wales which he declares "one of the most beautiful countries in the world. They do not have fences, but hedges grown out of hazel nuts and wild blackberries, about four or five feet high, so that one can drive for miles through these lanes and see the patches of green and yellow like a quilt pattern". But he found place names almost unpronounceable. Llanelly, for instance, is pronounced "chlanechley" with a "pouf" at the end.

ust 3, flying to England via New York, Newfoundland and Ireland, for a month's visit with his niece and other relatives whom he had not seen for many years. Although he didn't have time to see his cousin, Sir Rudolf Smith, he had a long talk with him on the telephone. He returned to Carmel this week after a hectic flight from New York made dramatic by "storm, thunder, lightning, wind and rain" and a forced landing in Nebraska, but he found it a great thrill to eat breakfast while travelling 300 miles per hour at a height of 20,000 feet. Happily esconced in his Penthouse on Seventh Street, Pop Smith hopes his many friends in Carmel will drop in to see him and hear the details of his trip. —Rosalind Sharpe.

See what this brand-new Fireball engine can do for Buicks built in the past ten years

YOU see here a hood-filling straight-eight power plant exactly like those which put an eager rush of Fireball energy at the command of folks who own 1947 Buicks.

But you don't have to be the owner of a 1947 Buick to boss this husky package of concentrated power around!

You don't have to wonder, "How about delivery?"

If you hanker for the thrill of having, beneath your toe, the surging power of a new Fireball engine, we're in a position to talk business right now.

How come? The answer is simple:

Out in the Buick factories, engine production is forging ahead — engines are coming off the line faster than bodies or other parts needed to build complete automobiles.

All of which means we can give you prompt delivery on 1947 power plants — brand-new, straight-from-the-factory Buick engines, ready to repower any Buick built in the past ten years.

If you own a Buick built between 1937 and 1942, the whole thing boils down to this:

We lift out the old engine — put in a new one — and send you on your happy way in less time than it would take for an overhaul.

That's why we say, buying one of these engines is the next best thing to getting a new Buick — and when you do get a new one, you'll have a better car to turn in.

Come in and let us show you how simple the whole thing is.

Mabel Baxter

Mrs. Thomas F. Baxter died suddenly from a heart attack, Friday, September 12, at her home on San Antonio and Eighth in Carmel. She had opened her home for a reception given by the Church of the Wayfarer in honor of Bishop and Mrs. James Chamberlain Baker. Just before the hour when the guests were to arrive, Mrs. Baxter was chatting with other welcoming hostesses when she was stricken.

The death of this gentle, gracious woman was a tremendous shock to her wide circle of friends on the Peninsula, where she has lived since she and her husband, the late Thomas F. Baxter came from Stockton 22 years ago to make their home in the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Baxter bought the home in Carmel where she has lived for the past seven years.

She was born in Boston, 74 years ago, and spent her youth and early married life in New England. In 1917, the Baxters moved to Stockton, California, where they were leaders in the cultural, social and civic life. For years Mr. Baxter was the President of the Board of Trustees of the College of the Pacific, and he and Mrs. Baxter were generous supporters of that institution.

Survivors are Thomas Baxter, II, of Healsburg, and his son Thomas Baxter, III, Mrs. F. Joseph Deitch of Stockton and her four children, Joseph, Sam and twin daughters, Helene and Ruth, and Dr. Philip Baxter of Piedmont and his two children, Philip and Barbara.

Private funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Paul's Mortuary in Pacific Grove, Dr. K. Fillmore Gray officiating in the simple ceremony. Only the family and a few close friends attended. Cremation followed and the interment will be at the Chapel of the Chimes in Oakland.

Anne Winslow

With the passing of Mrs. Anne Winslow in New York on August 26, Carmel lost one of its greatest benefactors. Though known only to the recipients and a few of her close friends, her gifts benefited many community projects. But a few members of the Church of the Wayfarer known that the organ they enjoy so much was a gift from Mrs. Winslow. Nor do the Carmel Red Cross workers realize that their commodious building was made possible through her generosity.

Other contributions included a Boy Scout Library complete and a children's reading table to the Harrison Memorial Library; comfortable chairs and lights for the firemen's lounge room; furnishings for the surgical department at the Peninsula hospital; and contributions to All Saints' choir boys. Also there were substantial checks for the City ambulance, the Woman's Club future home, and other civic and charitable organizations.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Winslow's hospitable home on Scenic and its beautiful garden with citrus bearing trees in the patio were a delight to their friends. With the death of her husband, however, Mrs. Winslow went to San Francisco to live. While visiting relatives in New York this summer, she died, and Carmel lost permanently a great and true friend.

Have You Read . . . ?

BY C. EDWARD GRAVES

It has been my good fortune this summer, while doing photographic work in Grand Teton National Park, to become acquainted with Sally Carrighar, author of the best-seller of two years ago, "One Day on Beetle Rock." She has been spending much of her time during the last three years in the Jackson Hole region at the foot of the Teton Mountains gathering material for her new book, "One Day at Teton Marsh." The publication date of this book has been set by her publisher, Alfred Knopf, for Sept. 25.

The general plan of her new book, which I have been privileged to read in manuscript form, is the same as that of her first one. A group of animals in their varying activities cross each others' trails during a given day in their lives. Their reactions are as varied as their individual natures. Sometimes it is a scare; sometimes it is a search for prey; and again it is the mating instinct or the play instinct. All these events take place in a natural marsh created by beaver dams near the confluence of Cottonwood Creek and the Snake River in Jackson Hole. Here Miss Carrighar spent many months studying the wild creatures of the region and she has supplemented her observations by intensive research in scientific libraries. Every event that she describes has a basis in fact in her own observations or those of her scientific friends.

The animals and birds that live in or near this marsh are moose, otters, mink, beavers, ospreys, merganser ducks, trumpeter swans and others. A trout, a frog, even insects such as mosquitoes, leeches and scuds, are other characters in her book. Miss Carrighar told me that she had a collection of about eighty mosquitoes in their various stages of growth under observation in her apartment for a long time before she wrote that particular chapter.

One afternoon in late August I was personally conducted by the author through Teton Marsh. Rarely have I met anyone who is so keenly sensitive to natural beauty. It was obvious from the first that every nook and cranny of this delightful tangle of live trees and dead trees, of flowers and weeds, of bushes with berries and bushes with thorns, of pools and ponds and back-washes and rivulets, of beaver dams and muskrat burrows, was intimately associated with her own experiences in sympathetic observation of the wild life there. Through the fast-yellowing aspen trees glimpses of the startling peaks of the Teton Range appeared to the west. The Snake River just a short distance away could be felt rather than seen or heard, as it slipped in sinuous curves through the bordering cottonwood trees toward the great canyon at the south end of Jackson Hole. Toward the east the lower foothills of the Gros Ventre mountains presented a gentler contrast to the stark grimness of the great Teton peaks on the west. There could be no more beautiful nor appropriate setting for a story of the lives of marsh animals and birds and insects. I envied her the many hours of patient watching that resulted in this new and sensitively beautiful book.

Her prose style is as graceful and effortless as the movements of the animals that she describes. Rhythm is a natural element of it, due perhaps in part to her early training in dance and music, in part to her unceasing search for the right words. She believes in continual rewriting. The episode of the encounter of two bull mooses—a balked fight, one might call it—was in its final form changed over almost completely from the first version. In one of her rewrites a bloody fight between the moose took place—a fight which left the author nervously exhausted at the completion of the writing—but this rewrite was later discarded for the version that now appears in the book. I mention this as one illustration of the painstaking work that goes into all of her composition. Imagination plays a large part in the drama of her animals but she

SILENT LAWS

*Each spring-time bud becomes an autumn leaf,
When law and beauty change the green to gold,
And dreams of singing youth turn into grief
As years make all remembered faces old.
Each season is a white-winged mystery,
Love-days are short and tearful nights are long,
Heart loneliness blends with immensity
Into the shade where memories belong.*

*The wind sweeps yellow leaves across the night
With scent and sound of simple, broken things,
The dreamy rhythm of a June's delight goes drifting by on frail October wings.
Above the trees the moon looks cold and strange,
As falling leaves prove silent laws of change.*

—BETTY L. WHITSELL.

THE SHAPES OF AUTUMN

*Witness the love I see in you—it has so many forms: remembering each spring the black-capped warblers slanted from slim boughs toward your eyes, your scarcely moving breath:
the orchard trees you planted, lengthened now,
repeating petaled bees:*

*Summer earth
reforming seed that you spade deep, or hill with earth-dark palms . . . summers, blackberry sweet, sun-darkening your shoulders russet brown.*

The shapes of autumn ripening your fields are part of you; logs stacked against the shed are whine of cross-cut saw and whistled hours that curved your lips to tuneless, wordless song . . .

Tonight a fall of rain is on the roof, and rock that knew the grind of surf until you found it, set it stone on stone, is warm with wood smoke. On the hearth your fire-flicked feet surrounded by the dogs . . .

It has so many forms, the love I see in you.

—GERTRUDE MAY LUTZ

MISSION CARMEL

*White doves rest on the aged rood
Beneath whose cross-tree Serra stood
On tireless feet, and prayed and planned
A song of the Lord in an alien land.*

*The Mission bell-tower etched with years
Still boasts a hope that conquers fears;
Though cracked of voice its heart is young
As it marks the hours with timeless tongue.*

*A ghostly eucalyptus stands Lifting up its thin long hands
To gather in the moonlight beams
And spray the cloister wrapped in dreams.*

—JOSEPH McCLOSKEY.

Carmel Story . . .

BY DAISY BOSTICK—CHAPTER II.

BEFORE THE WHITE MAN

Before we begin to talk of the old houses and their ghosts, let us go farther back to the days when your land and mine was part of a primitive wilderness, to the days when it slept in the sun and fog and rain—when the mountain lion came down from the hills and the huge grizzly bears waddled along contentedly—both possibly in search for their own kind or for food or possibly just from a wanderlust. If you had several thousand acres for your home ground, wouldn't you like to wander through your vast estate?

The forest must have been full of deer grazing peacefully and nibbling at the tender branches of the young trees. There were undoubtedly pine stumps with moss, lichen and ferns growing over them and a gray-green carpet of grass covering the ground. There were low hills and dells and ravines, and a tremendous silence, broken only by the patter of rain, the soft murmuring of animals calling to each other, the chatter of squirrels and chipmunks, the sweet chirping of the birds and the boom of the distant waves with the monotonous undertone of the sea.

The native Indians in their meanderings from place to place scarcely disturbed the enveloping pattern. But when the white man came into the picture almost two hundred years ago and began to push his way through the wilderness and establish trails, to kill for meat, to fell trees and to build his habitations, new terrifying sounds were heard. The strange thing called a gun sent its reverberations through the brooding silence, sounds of hammering and sawing were harsh new voices in the almost impenetrable forest. The deer grew shy and the squirrels stopped their chattering and the forest was no longer a safe haven for the wild things.

As the white man came in larger and larger numbers, no longer did the lion travel undisturbed nor did the California grizzly roam in safety through his wilderness. The bear were caught and roped and forced to fight fierce bulls in a pit in Monterey for the amusement of cheering people, and now strange animals called horses and cattle began to appear on the fringes of the forest. Farther and farther back the wild life retreated.

In the more remote parts of the wilderness the silence must have become profound, for birds and animals have ways of warning their kind of lurking danger. It was as if nature were holding its breath waiting for its great change. The trees would soon be cut down, houses would cover the mossy banks, men would trample the ferns and flowers and ugly cleared spaces called roads would wind through the tangle of shrubs and trees.

Monterey was coming along from the first small settlement made by Portola and Father Juniper Serra in 1770. At first it contained only a group of Spanish soldiers who were left in the Presidio to guard the surrounding territory against possible marauding Indians and fierce animals. With the De Anza party's arrival five years later came settlers with their families. With their intermarriages and those between soldiers and new settlers, a small population began to settle outside the Presidio walls. A village came into being. Men trekked in from near and far all bent on staying in the new land and establishing various kinds of business.

One of the immigrants was Honore Escolle, a Frenchman, who had met and married Adele Duval in New Orleans. He was shrewd and a hard worker and soon began to prosper. He established Monterey's first bakery. It was in the old Washington hotel. He bought the Stokes adobe and being dissatisfied with the financial results from his bakery, he moved the huge oven to the backyard of his adobe and converted it into a kiln for the manufacture of pottery. He

Wedding At Wayfarer

Patricia Jeanne Cezar and Andrew Vern James took their marriage vows Tuesday afternoon at the Church of the Wayfarer, Dr. K. Fillmore Gray, minister of the church, performing the ceremony. June Marise Connor attended the bride, and Robert J. Gunther acted as best man. The young people came down from Stanford where Mr. James is a student, to be married in the Church of the Wayfarer.

University Women's Reception

Monterey Peninsula Branch of the American Association of University Women will hold a reception and tea for prospective members tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock at Colton Hall in Monterey. Some eighty women eligible for membership have been invited and will be present to the receiving line of officers headed by the president, Mrs. Gordon Beall, by other members of the organization. During the afternoon something of the interesting history of the building where California's first constitution was written and adopted will be told by Mr. Delbert R. Jeffers of the Monterey public library. The affair is a purely social welcome to the new members, with business deferred to next meeting which is set for early in October.

College Bound

Mary Gregory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Gregory left Tuesday morning for Berkeley where she will enter the University of California. Mary received one of the coveted Alumni Freshman scholarships and is an outstanding member of the younger group in Carmel. She was a member of the Pine Cone Staff during the summer and also modeled for Henrietta Shore's creative art classes in Adult School.

Carmel Missionary Society

The Carmel Missionary Society will meet next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 at the Church of the Wayfarer with Mrs. Louise Grigsby in charge. Dr. K. Fillmore Gray, pastor of the church, will be speaker for the afternoon. The Missionary Society is the oldest organization of women in the village, as it has been meeting for forty years, counting in its membership all women interested in the work in foreign fields as well as in this country. It is now carried on jointly by All Saints' Church and the Wayfarer, with a chairman from each. Meetings are held quarterly, alternating between the churches. Women of Carmel are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

West Point Dinner at Ord

There will be an informal West Point dinner at the Fort Ord Officer's Club at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday, September 20. The principal speaker will be Col. Chauncey L. Fenton, president of the Association of Graduates, who will discuss current affairs at West Point. The Commanding General at Fort Ord, Major General Jens A. Doe, has cordially invited members of the West Point Alumni Society of the Monterey Peninsula to attend, and the cost of the dinner will be $1.50 per plate which will include liquid refreshments.

SARA FARRAR, SOCIAL EDITOR

Due to the fact that the dinner is being announced at such short notice, it will be assumed that all members of the West Point Alumni Society will attend unless notice is given to the contrary. Anyone wishing to cancel his reservation may call Col. Raymond S. Pratt, Class of 1901, President of the Association, Brigadier General William H. Hobson, class of 1912, Vice-President at Monterey 8649; Colonel William C. Chapman, class of 1917, secretary, at Monterey 4680; or Major Dean H. Jones, secretary of the Fort Ord Officer's Club, at Monterey 8511, Extension 441.

Guests of The Kutz

Captain James Fulton Kutz and Mrs. Kutz had as their guests over the weekend Mr. and Mrs. William Wallace of Berkeley, and Mrs. Kutz's niece, Mrs. Carl Koford and her husband. Both Mr. and Mrs. Koford are biologists and Mr. Koford is taking a degree at the University of California. The Kutz's have leased a house on Carmelo and Seventeenth, while their home is being built on Travis Way.

Art Gallery Anniversary

The Carmel Art Gallery will celebrate its 20th anniversary on Friday with a barbecue at the Carmel Valley Inn. Festivities will begin at 5:30 in the afternoon. All classes of membership are invited, Associate, Sustaining, Life, and Patrons. Mrs. Rama Stearns is head of the entertainment committee. A strolling Mexican orchestra will furnish music and the lovely grounds behind the Inn will be an ideal setting for the affair.

Hawaiian Party At Racquet Club

A colorful party was given at the Racquet Club honoring Frances Brown of Honolulu, by Mrs. Winona Love on Tuesday evening. Hawaiian singers were flown over from the Islands and an orchestra imported from southern California for the occasion, furnished music for this lavish affair. About sixty guests were invited.

Countess Dandini's Tea

Countess Lillian Dandini De Cesena, President of Le Salon Français, was hostess at a delightful tea on Sunday afternoon following the dedication of the La Perouse plaque at the Carmel Mission. The affair was given at Countess Dandini's home in Carmel Woods, Portola and San Lucas, and all the honor guests at the dedication ceremonies were present. Countess Dandini was assisted in receiving by her house guests Mr. and Mrs. Van V. Midgley, Mrs. Ludovica D. Graham and Mrs. Bietry-Salinger. Guests were greeted with a glass of champagne on arriving. The tea table was decorated with huge pale blue hydrangia and lit with pale blue candles that carried out the color of the blue escutcheon of the Di Cesena family, which is painted on the mantle of the fireplace in the dining room. Mrs. Roy Margo of San Leandro poured coffee with Mrs. John Sheppard Lewis and Miss Susan Holahr of Salt Lake City serving tea.

Among the guests who called during the reception were Consul of France and Madame Andre Rousselet, Colonel C. P. Sullivan (representing General Mark Clark) and Mrs. Sullivan, Rev. Father Alvin of Santa Cruz and Palo Alto, Dr. and Mrs. Raoul Blanguie and the Misses Blanguie. Dr. Blanguie was the speaker at the California Historical Society luncheon at the Casa Munras in Monterey and chairman of the La Perouse Committee in San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Andre Ferrier, Mr. Anson Blake, president of the San Francisco Chapter of the California Historical Society; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Cross, who are active in the California Historical Society.

Graham, formerly of Boston; Mr. Grayson Diamon of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Carmel Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff Buckles, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lofton, Miss Jean Kellogg and Miss Adelaide MacColgan.

Road, foundation and tunneling crews are now rushing work to beat the rains and snows of winter.

Here are the new plants, their cost and capacity:

ROCK CREEK—North fork of the Feather River, to cost $35,400,000, will deliver 169,000 horsepower.

CRESTA—North fork of the Feather River, to cost $26,400,000, will deliver 101,000 horsepower.

COLGATE—on the Yuba River, to cost $3,325,000, will deliver 40,000 horsepower.

ELECTRA—on the Mokelumne River, to cost $15,600,000, will deliver 133,000 horsepower.

WEST POINT—on the Mokelumne River, to cost $4,000,000, will deliver 21,000 horsepower.

These new hydroelectric plants are part of the greatest construction program in the history of the P. G. and E.—a $350 million expansion plan that will add 1,000,000 electric horsepower to the company's system by 1951.

Smith-Schultz Wedding

In the beautiful candle-lighted Stanford Memorial Church, at a four o'clock ceremony, on Sunday afternoon, September 7, Elizabeth Batchelder Schultz of San Francisco and Elko, Nevada, became the bride of Franklin Rhys Smith of San Francisco, formerly of Salinas and Carmel. Dr. R. Marvin Stuart of the First Methodist Church of Palo Alto officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Frank J. Landon of El Cerrito, chose for her wedding dress a floor length gown of ice-blue silk crepe which was designed for her by Marie of San Francisco, with fitted bodice, long sleeves and side drape of tiny pleats. With it she wore a matching Juliette cap with halo effect of blue tulle and she carried a white Bible.

The attendants were matching frocks made with a long fitted bodice, off the shoulder effect, and full long skirts with a bustle. The matron of honor, Virginia Barrymore of Clarksburg, was in Chartreuse Satin, and the bridesmaid, Miss Jerry Bowers of San Francisco wore orchid satin. Both carried colonial bouquets of fall flowers in contrasting shades. The two charming young daughters of the bride, Louise and Wilma Schultz of Elko, Nevada, were junior bridesmaids and wore long princess style frocks of pink and aqua taffeta and carried miniature colonial bouquets of pink and blue flowers.

The best man was Mr. John Baron of San Francisco and the ushers were Mr. Edward Fox of San Francisco and Chief Radioman E. Frederick Smith, Jr., of Moffett Field, brother of the groom.

Preceding the ceremony, the bride's sister, Mrs. Giles W. Payzont of Santa Rosa, sang Greig's Ich Liebe Dich and during the ceremony, the groom's sister, Mrs. Calvin Robinson of San Jose sang Malotte's, The Lord's Prayer.

Although the bride's father, Mr. Frank P. Batchelder of Elko, Nevada, was unable to be present, Mrs. Batchelder was present, and wore for the occasion a brown and white print dress with brown accessories and her corsage was of white gardenias. The groom's mother, Mrs. E. Frederick Smith of Palo Alto, wore a black sheer with pink yoke and matching pink hat and her corsage also was of white gardenias.

A reception following the ceremony was held at the social hall of the First Methodist Church in Palo Alto. Hostesses for the reception were the bride's sister, Mrs. Payzont and the groom's sister-in-law, Mrs. E. Frederick Smith, Jr. Guests present included the following relatives from out of town: Mrs. Frank P. Batchelder, mother of the bride, of Elko, Nevada; the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Landon of El Cerrito; the bride's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Hansen of Richmond and another sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Giles W. Payzont of Santa Rosa. Relatives of the groom present were besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Frederick Smith of Palo Alto; his brother and wife, CRM and Mrs. E. Frederick Smith, Jr., of Moffett Field and Los Altos; his sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin W. Robinson (who also were married in Stanford Memorial Church in June, 1946) and their six weeks old daughter, Kathryn Anne Robinson of San Jose; and his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ray B. Hawes of Oakland.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Batchelder of Elko, Nevada, and was educated in Elko schools and is at present employed at RCA in San Francisco where the groom is also employed and where the young couple first met. The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Frederick Smith, now of Palo Alto, but formerly of Salinas and Carmel, grew up in Monterey County and attended Salinas and Carmel schools. He enlisted in the Navy shortly after Pearl Harbor when still a senior at Carmel High, but was able to graduate with his class the following June, which was the first class to graduate from the new school. He spent almost four years in the Navy and three years overseas as a member of the crew of the famous USS Boise and saw a great deal of action both in the South Pacific and the Atlantic battles, and with General MacArthur in the recapture of the Philippines. He was discharged from the Navy in November, 1945, and went to work as a Radio Operator for RCA in January, 1946.

Following a week's honeymoon, which included a weekend at Santa Cruz, the young couple will be at home at 1462 Page Street in San Francisco. For her going away ensemble the bride wore a tan suit with brown accessories and her corsage was of gardenias and Stephanotis.

Jaunt North

Miss Agnes Williston returned last Saturday from a ten-day jaunt by automobile up north with her sister, Mrs. Jesse Burk of Palo Alto. They drove up the Redwood highway into Oregon and visited relatives on a farm near Corvallis. Returning they came down the central valley with side trips to Shasta dam and other points of interest.

Honore Escolle loved land and he acquired a large holding including much of the territory of what is now Carmel. In our next article we shall try to tell of subsequent ownerships and how Carmel was founded and how it got its name.

never allows her imagination to lead her away from scientific facts, as a number of popular authors have done. And through all her animal dramas are startlingly beautiful descriptions of the natural landscape settings in which they take place, descriptions that to me are the outstanding features of the book. Authors who can compel and hold attention in descriptions of natural scenery are all too rare.

In reading her book the only spot that seemed weak to me was the undramatic climax in the chapter on the Beaver in which the big cottonwood tree that anchored the beaver dam was uprooted by the storm, thus allowing the pond to drain temporarily with a terrific impact on the lives of its inhabitants until the Beaver could mend it again. Just previously a spirit of tension had been built up by the approach of an otter to the beaver house and it seemed to me that the dramatic suspense should have been continued with the crescendo in the wind storm to the final crash of the tree with its accompanying tragedy. When I spoke of this to the author, she gave me a very simple explanation which I should like to pass on to any readers who may be at first puzzled about it as I was. She said: "The falling of trees is an ordinary incident in the lives of

From where I sit . . . by Joe Marsh

Yes, I'm Guilty!

Folks sometimes criticize us small-town editors for the way we often play up "little things" ahead of big . . . human, local news in place of world events.

I can't deny it. Read the Clarion and you'll learn about the Martins' golden wedding anniversary . . . about the community sing down by the river . . . the husking bee at Sober Hoskins', where neighbors helped husk the corn, and later drank sparkling beer together.

"Little things?" Maybe. But in where I sit, they add up to the bigger things we call America: The friendliness of small towns . . . the helping hand . . . the respect for one another's rights. And above all the love of fellowship and freedom—whether it's freedom to speak one's mind or choose between a glass of beer or buttermilk.

I figure that if everybody looks after the "little things," maybe the bigger things will take care of themselves.

You'll feel a good deal more like Christmas when that season, of which you will doubtless be hearing more, does arrive if you do something about it now. The generally accepted first chore is to settle the Christmas card question. BILL'S BOOK AND CARD SHOP on Dolores and Sixth has a quattrain like this: "Remember last Christmas, When you made a vow, You'd order cards early; Well! Early is now." To match the quattrain BILL'S has Christmas cards which are really new and different and do not look at all like last year's cards re-issued. For cards made from interesting papers in delightful colors and designs ask to see the Carlis and Frederiksen book from San Francisco. These cards are most attractive and the designs are unusual—castles, angels, trees—but done in a new manner.

All the cards from Carlis and Frederiksen cost the same price, eighteen dollars a hundred, which includes imprinting with your name. More expensive, but more conventional, are the Nu-Art cards. In this group you'll find elegant cards in white and gold, cards embossed in a Wedgewood blue or green, cards elaborately engraved and cards for business firms. The National Detroit line is inexpensive, and includes some unusual ideas, which may be tailored to the individual family. There's one card with stair-stepped Indians which may be ordered in sizes and shapes and sex to correspond with your own household, not excluding the dog. Wolo has cards out this year too, anyone who knows his Amanda, the spotted snake, or Taurux, the bad black beaver, will be drawn to his beaming reindeer and playing children. There's a Wolo seal which is pure charm. These cards, with all Wolo's color and gaiety, cost $2.95 for twenty-five. The prices of all these cards at BILL'S BOOK AND CARD SHOP include imprinting with name. Five minutes or so spent there now will mean that very shortly you'll have your Christmas cards all ready for mailing, and BILL'S Christmas catalogues are fascinating to leaf through. He has such a large number of pleasing cards it's difficult to choose between them.

"Once over" with wonder-working Dutch Boy WONS-OVER and dull, dingy walls are fresh and lovely. WONS-OVER is quick-drying, ready-to-use, oil-base paint. Brush it on, or roll it on. WONS-OVER colors are lovely.

Brevity is good for underwear. Briefly, you'll find at THE SILVER THIMBLE on Dolores those delectable, not to be surpassed for quality or workmanship slips, pants and gowns bearing the SAAB label as advertised in the September VOGUE. There are half slips too. Where and when else can you buy a hand finished petticoat with hand scalloped satin edges, in white, pink, blue, or yellow for $4.95?

Soap is interesting. Now, for instance, in FORTIER'S after four years of not being available, transparent glycerine soap may be purchased. This soap is made by the 4711 people—whose four thousand seven hundred and eleventh experimental formula was the pot of gold at the rainbow's end—and its white rose scent is ladylike and its glycerine base kind to ladylike skins. 4711 soap comes also in balsam pine and carnation scent. All this soap is French milled and hard, to resist the corroding effects of local water. There's a Shulton super-fatted milk soap which is recommended for people with allergies. If you must be luxurious and sweet as well as clean there are Lenthier's soaps to waft a cloud of perfume in Tweed, Shanghai or Miracle—through your bath.

Two things to catch your eye in THE VILLAGE BOOK SHOP on Ocean above Dolores: Miriam Clark Potter's new book for children is "Hello, Mrs. Goose" a new addition to the series of adventure stories about Mrs. Goose of Anmaltown. Miriam Clark Potter is known nationally as Mother Goose's mother but in Carmel she's Mrs. Zenas Potter. Other adventures which you'll find considerably more exciting if you've passed the Goose years are those of Andre Gide. The publication of the first volume of Gide's journals is a major event. Justin O'Brien of Columbia edited and translated the journal, which covers brilliantly a wide span of time and place.

Tea For Mitchells

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Hull recently gave a tea honoring Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Mitchell when the new Superintendent and his wife were introduced to the faculty of the Sunset School. About 20 were presented to their new chief.

Robin Off To College

Colonel and Mrs. Shelburn Robison took their daughter, Robin, to San Francisco last Sunday, where Robin enters San Francisco College for Women, on Lone Mountain. The college is conducted by the Order of the Sacred Heart.

Farwell Mrs. McGregor

Mrs. Thomas McGregor and her twin sons, Rob Roy and Thomas, Jr., leave Carmel today for San Francisco, where they will sail on September 22, for Japan, to join Colonel McGregor, who has been in the Orient for a year. The past week Mrs. McGregor has been honored almost every day with a farewell party. Tuesday, she went to San Francisco for a luncheon given by Mrs. Neal McKay at Ft. Mason, Officer's Club. Mrs. John W. Morse and Mrs. Fred Treat, Jr., entertained at a buffet supper and cocktail party on Sunday. Mrs. Frank Work asked Mrs. McGregor's friends in on Wednesday for a farewell cocktail party. As if there wasn't enough going on, Mrs. McGregor had a birthday anniversary on Thursday, and her mother, Mrs. Fred A. Treat, entertained at a luncheon, asking Mrs. Stuart Work, Mrs. John Morse, Mrs. J. P. Steele, and Mrs. Fred Treat, Jr., to share the festivities. Mrs. J. P. Steele managed to get in another cocktail party Thursday evening as a final wind up of the farewells.

News of the floods around Tokyo is disturbing Mrs. McGregor as the Colonel is stationed in the Capital. Rob Roy and Thomas, have been attending Carmel High School and will continue their studies in Yokohama, where they will prepare to take their examinations for West Point. They expect to become the fourth generation of Army people. After eighteen months in the Orient, Colonel McGregor plans to retire and they will build a permanent home in Carmel, where they have acquired a site of 20 acres.

Search For Percy Gray

Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Stockfleth of Berkeley came to Carmel on Wednesday with a painting by Percy Gray that had come to them as an inheritance. It was a lovely watercolor of one of the old Carmel homes that Percy Gray had done 30 years ago. The Stockfleths wanted to find the artist and ask him to identify the house. The Art Gallery was closed, and after searching the town, De Neale Morgan was able to tell them that Percy Gray no longer lives in Carmel, but he could be traced through the Graves Gallery in San Francisco.

All Saints' Young People

The first Fall meeting of the Young People's Group of All Saints' Church was held in the Parish House at 5:30 p. m. last Sunday, September 14.

Biz Carr, Barbara Berg, Ed Goodrick, and Legare McNeill reported on their experiences at the Diocesan Youth Conference which was held at Boulder Creek in August. After the election of officers, a light supper was served. The meeting closed with a service in the church at which the newly elected officers were installed.

Those elected were as follows: president, Barbara Berg; vice president and treasurer, Ginger Klein, Secretary, Jennifer Lloyd; chairman of worship committee, Biz Carr; chairman of study committee, Margot Boice; chairman of service committee, Pat Casey; and chairman of fellowship committee, Dan Holmes.

The following were appointed to Committees: worship: Hilary Carson, Ann Thoeni, Ed Goodrick; study: Carol Templeman, Nancy Brown; service: Mike Frisbie, Susan Smith, and fellowship: Legare McNeill, and Ginger Klein.

Margaret Ann Butts Arrives

Mr. and Mrs. Orvil "Bud" Butts welcomed a new daughter September 17, 8:30 a. m., at the Community Hospital, Margaret Ann. There are two brothers and a sister at Santa Fe and First Streets waiting to welcome her when she and her mother come home.

A girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pasquarosa at the Community Hospital September 14. The parents live at First and Dolores in Carmel.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

"Matter" is the subject of the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon for Sunday, September 21, with the Golden Text from I John: "Little children, keep yourselves from idols" (5:21).

The following citations are included in the sermon:

I Corinthians: "For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him" (8:5, 6).

"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Science deals its chief blow at the supposed material foundations of life and intelligence. It dooms idolatry. A belief in other gods, other creators, and other creations must go down before Christian Science" (p. 535).

Mrs. J. F. M. Scott

Mrs. Jefferies Frances Morse Scott, who had lived in Carmel for the past seven and a half years, died on Sunday, September 14, at her home at Junipero and Eighth Streets. She had been in ill health for a long time.

A native of San Francisco, Mrs.
Scott was associated with Kendall
Mills in San Francisco and Walpole, Massachusetts, for many years before coming to Carmel in 1940. She was well-known in American Red Cross activities on the Peninsula and was assistant director of Gray Lady work at Fort Ord. Recently she bought a dress shop in New Monterey.

Surviving Mrs. Scott are her mother, Mrs. Zena L. Morse, her daughter, Mrs. Alphonse Elsen, and her grandson, Michael E. El-sen, all of whom live in Carmel.

Funeral services were held at the T. A. Dorney Chapel in Monterey on Monday afternoon, September 15.

Roy Benadon

Roy Benadon, who had been employed for many years as a butcher at Vining's on Dolores Street, died suddenly on Friday afternoon, September 12, in his car after he got through work. A native of Wasco, Oregon, he was 59 years old and had been in poor health for some time.

He made his home in Monterey at 1241 Eighth Street.

He leaves his wife, Agnes, his daughter, Mrs. Clyde Klanann of Monterey, his son, Harold, and three brothers and three sisters.

Funeral services were held at 2
p.m. Tuesday afternoon, September 16, at the T. A. Dorney Chapel in Monterey followed by interment at El Carmelo Cemetery.

No Documents In Hartnell Trunk

At the meeting of the Art and History Board in Monterey last week it was learned from Mrs.
Anne Fisher, who had interviewed members of the Soberanes family in Salinas regarding the W. E.
P. Hartnell collection, that a trunk and some school-books were being offered for sale at $1200. Unfortunately, the collection contains no documents, as Nat Soberanes has sold them to collectors in recent years who offered high prices for them.

The trunk in question was one used by W. E. P. Hartnell, one of the first naturalized citizens of California during the Mexican era, who was prominent in the affairs of the capital at Monterey, and the school-books had been used as texts at the Hartnell College near Salinas. Founded by W. E. P.
Hartnell who was particularly interested in teaching "morals and manners and essay-writing," according to Mrs. Fisher, Hartnell College was the first college in California. Among the schoolbooks are six volumes of Pope and two old atlases. One of the atlases, printed in France in the 18th Century, is particularly interesting for it locates Carmel River on the map of California as emptying into San Francisco Bay.

However, these books contain no specimens of Hartnell's handwriting, so they hold no value for the historical society.

The Soberanes came into possession of the W. E. P. Hartnell collection owing to the fact that Hartnell married Dona Teresa de la Guerra of Santa Barbara, and her sister married a man named Smith. The daughter of Mrs.
Smith, a niece by marriage of W.
E. P. Hartnell, married one of the Soberanes clan. Eventually the Soberanes family inherited Hart-nell's papers and personal possessions.

Nat Soberanes also has Hart-nell's piano at his home in Salinas.

Roberts Readings Appreciated By Church Auxiliary

Those present at the first meeting in the fall of the All Saints' Church Women's Auxiliary, Wednesday, September 17, had the opportunity of hearing R. Ellis Roberts' interpretive readings of English poetry on the subject of Love, Earthly and Divine. After explaining that the subject was far too large to be covered in any reasonable length of time R. Ellis Roberts divided his subject into three parts: Love of Beasts, Love of Human Beings, and Divine Love, giving readings to illustrate each with a few personal comments. From the moment he began reading 'The Darkling Thrush', the first of his poems on Love of beasts, R. Ellis Roberts literally cast a spell over his audience, receiving several spontaneous bursts of applause from his listeners throughout the talk, one time being after his reading of G. K. Chesterton's 'The Song of Quoodle' which ended the first group of poems.

Poems on the Love of Human Beings included the writings of Byron, Shakespeare, Katherine Phillips, Whitman, Christina Rossetti, Dickinson, Milley, and Yates. Particularly moving were renditions of Byron's, 'So We'll Go, Whitman's Unknown Soldier', poems on parting by Christina Rossetti and Emily Dickinson, Dirge by Edna St. Vincent Milley, and Yeat's Second Troy and When You Are Old.

In the last group, Divine Love, the expressions through poetry on the measure of God's Love for man were represented by readings of the works of G. Herbert, J. Donne, G. K. Chesterton and Gerard Manley Hopkins, with a beautiful reading of the Prodigal Son and an excerpt from The Canticles. One poem, Twice, by Rossetti showed a way in which man might come to love God.

This most eloquent and soul satisfying talk came to a close with the reading of Gerard Manley Hopkins' poem, The Echoes, in which Mr. Roberts demonstrated the beautiful use of subtle and precise placements of tone of voice to create the mood of the particular poem and thereby carry the more exact meaning of the poet to the listener as he does throughout his readings.

Tea was served during a pause between the second and third sections of the talk. The audience was thoroughly appreciative of Mr. Roberts' presence at the meeting and will be looking forward to hearing him in the future.

The next meeting of the All Saints' Women's Auxiliary will be a luncheon held on October 1.

Juveniles Outstanding In Golden Bough Play

Morgan begins as a Billie Burke part, and then, especially in the second scene of the second act, the authors of the play change it to a part which even the late Clare Eames would have found difficult. There is no unity in Louise's character; and Dorothy Dean is not to blame that she cannot give what is not there. I don't know if anyone could have done better. Although Tack Cooper's role is more single than Louise's, yet James Robinson has a part which inevitably suffers from the uncertainty in the authors' portrayal of Louise. Whenever he has a chance he takes it, and is admirable in his scenes with Alix and Ilka—not quite so good in the phony and genuine emotional scenes with Tess: here again it may be the fault of the play.

The play is a collaboration by Mr. Frederick Kohner and Mr. Albert Mannheimer. I know nothing of the authors, nor of the play's production in the remote village on Manhattan Island. From purely internal evidence, I should judge that Mr. Kohner or Mr. Mannheimer each wrote a scene or two, without his colleague's help and each got in some pet piece by consenting to let the other fellow keep his little favourite. The story is good. Mrs. Morgan, whose husband is notable in the home by his absence, has divorced Charles two years before the play opens: she has not told the children. (They've learned the truth from their father, who assures them that everything will be settled when he next appears). But Louise Morgan has, some two months before, met, in Mexico, and married Tack Cooper, a business executive from Cincinnati. She wants to break the news gently to the children, of whom only Alix has the sense to appreciate Cooper when

Hi Chatter

By PEGGY RIKER

Wednesday morning found a sleepy line of students once again wending their way up the hill to renew their search for knowledge at good old Carmel High School. The opening day began with a Welcome Assembly in the cafeteria at which time Stuart Mitchell greeted the eighth grade and all new students.

Carmel High has become cosmopolitan this term with the addition of several new students from distant countries. Among them are Julianne Poulichet, who has just returned from Brittany where she has resided since she was a small child; Lorentz Böll, who has just completed three years at a high school in Norway and is finishing his education in this country; Niells and Gunner Reimers who have been in Norway for the past year; and Jean Peyton, who has been attending school in Germany, where her father was stationed.

On Friday the first meeting of the new student council was held, when six girls were nominated to compete as candidates for queen he comes as a guest. From there, Tess and Ilka, aided by the superb bumbling and brashness of Winston, try to ease Cooper out of the house. They are particularly anxious because Charles has cabled that he'll be back in two days. I will tell no more of the plot, which is ingeniously designed and most adroitly unravelled, after the luckless misfire at the end of that deplorable second scene in the second act. The writing is of the most uncertain quality. The children's parts, especially Alix', are good; so is Winston's and a good deal of Tack Cooper's—but at times the dialogue and the thought behind it are disappointing. The minor characters are well made and well played. As a maid, Nancy, Bertha-Marie Lane gives a performance so good that one congratulates oneself on being without 'domestic help'. Kenneth Smith has a brief appearance as a drayman, and makes a rich thing of it. As Alix' great friend, Dippy Marshall, Deborah Geering is refreshingly natural. Mary McElroy's Jerry has that terrible smoothness which sends the old hankering after a revival of discipline, while Arthur Balazs' Tom was shatteringly life-like. If he's not careful that boy will grow up to be a cheer-leader. I must not forget to mention how much the play gained from the setting, for which William Kappy and Lee Crowe were responsible. The audience applauded as soon as they saw the terrace of Louise Morgan's New York apartment. It was a great night for the Kusters—behind the scenes Mrs. Kuster was illustrating Tennyson's Lincolnshire verses about "Property, property, property", and, as always, Colin was working away.

to represent Carmel High at the County Fair in Monterey on the 26th of this month. The following girls were chosen on the basis of personality and attractiveness: Jennifer Lloyd, Doris May, Edelyn Cory, Nancy Anderson, Larene Townsend, and Biz Carr.

The social season at Carmel High was introduced last Friday evening when the students gathered in the cafeteria for a Welcome Dance. Organized by Jennifer Lloyd, Commissioner of Social Affairs; its success was an indication of the support and enthusiasm to be expected throughout the year.

The do-or-die expression on the faces of our "campus he-men" indicates that Carmel will be seen on top of the football pile-up this year. Prior to the first game of the season with the Monterey Junior Varsity, a student body meeting and rally will be held in the gymnasium. Friday evening the Girls Athletic Association is sponsoring a dance in honor of the football team.

As one can see by the preceding activities, Carmel High School has started the year with enthusiasm. With the cooperation of the townspeople, and the spirit which has always been maintained in the past, the coming year should be one of the best Carmel High has seen.
